

This is a collection of mystery, science fiction, and cross-genre short stories. The strange disappearance of cats, a blind man who can see, and a murder or two headline the mysteries, but there is also the horror of seeing things that aren't there and the odd, sometimes criminal, behavior it elicits. Then, of course, there are the things that are there.... The science fiction portion of the collection sometimes blends into fantasy or horror as experiments don't go as smoothly as anticipated, and what can we say about space? It isn't exactly a user-friendly environment....
