

Mavis Cheeks debut novel won the John Menzies First Novel Prize and is, according to The Observer, a juicy blackish comedy that carries off its alertly attractive staginess with aplomb. - Joans answer to life after divorce is happy seclusion. She rejects the outside world and embarks on a contented existence of isolated self-indulgence - but when she meets the roguish, desirable actor Finbar Flynn the walls of her citadel begin to crack. A very funny novel, said The Daily Telegraph, with good characters, an inventive, well-controlled plot and a fine ear for dialogue. Justifiably called a hilarious first novel it is guaranteed entertainment from start to finish.
