

Christina Montgomery dreads another Christmas with questions about her soldier husband, Johnny, hanging over her head. She believes he died with his small sniper squadron a little over two years earlier, even though his was the only body unaccounted for. The Marine Corps have all but called Johnny a defector. There are even a few Legend locals who believe it, too. This is something Christina refuses to consider. Until one snowy evening two weeks before Christmas... An injured man, looking like a slightly older version of the husband she remembers, arrives at her Tennessee farm with no idea of who he is. Even with a blizzard about to hit the area hard, she can't focus on anything but the questions clouding her mind. Is his sudden appearance a Christmas miracle? Or has her worst nightmare just come true?
